INTRODUCTION

In this report we present updated percentile ranks for all DIBELS 8th Edition (i.e., DIBELS 8) benchmark assessments. We chose to update the DIBELS 8 percentile ranks for the 2024-2025 school year because the operational percentile ranks in the mCLASS and DIBELS Data System are three years old, having been derived from the 2021-2022 national sample, and collected when most schools transitioned back to in-person instruction after an extended period of school closure due to the COVID-19 pandemic (National Center for Education Statistics, 2021). Given the evidence on the initial setback and slow recovery in academic achievement (Betthäuser et al., 2023; Furjanic et al., 2024; Lewis & Kuhfeld, 2025) as well as persistent changes in student composition (Francis & Goodman, 2025), we hypothesized that the 2024-2025 scores would differ from the prior norms. Across measures and timepoints in Grades K-3, the distributions and median scores in 2024-25 are marginally higher than those in 2021-2022, whereas the distributions and median scores are similar between 2021-2022 and 2024-2025 for Grades 4 and above. A more complete comparison of the two norming samples is provided in Technical Report 26-001 (University of Oregon, 2026). These results provide a rationale for updating the percentile ranks in the mCLASS and DIBELS data systems to align with current performance trends.

Method

RECOMMENDED STANDARDS FOR INTERPRETING PERCENTILE RANK SCORES

Percentile ranks (or percentiles) are a common metric used to facilitate the interpretation of individual characteristics relative to the distribution of those characteristics in a particular group of people. Percentiles can describe measurable physical characteristics, such as height or weight, as well as more abstract attributes, such as intelligence or reading proficiency. Regardless of the attribute being measured, the validity of the interpretation depends on understanding both what is being measured and the norm group used for comparison.

As an example, consider the issue of interpreting an individual's height—both as a raw score (e.g., number of centimeters tall) and a percentile score (i.e., the percentile for height). If we know that someone is 164 centimeters tall, we have some information about him or her, but we know very little else. Without knowing more about who the person is and to whom they are being compared, both raw scores and percentiles are difficult to interpret.

On the one hand, if a person who is 164 centimeters tall is compared to the distribution of adult males in the U.S., they would fall below the 5th percentile and we could conclude that this person is short, relative to other U.S. adult males (Halls & Hanson, 2000). In contrast, if we were to compare this same person to 12-year-old children in the U.S., they would fall at the 95th percentile and we would conclude that this person is quite tall, compared to other 12-year-olds in the U.S. (National Center for Health Statistics, 2000). If we used either of the above comparison groups and the person was an adult woman, we would have made an incorrect comparison and drawn the wrong conclusion: a height of 164 centimeters falls at the 50th percentile for adult women in the U.S., which is in the average range (Halls & Hanson, 2000). As this example makes clear, the same raw score can correspond to very different percentile ranks depending on the comparison group.

Educators frequently use percentiles to describe the relative position of student scores on performance-based measures. In all cases, the language used to describe the percentile score should convey the maximum possible information about the group to which the individual is being compared. Consider the following example as a guideline when interpreting student reading performance using the percentiles in this report. If Grade 3 Jonny performed at the 75th percentile on a commonly accepted measure of

Oral Reading Fluency (e.g., DIBELS Oral Reading Fluency), it would be appropriate to say, “On a standard assessment of Oral Reading Fluency, Jonny performed as well as or better than 75 percent of other Grade 3 students in a nationally representative sample of students.”

Percentile scores range from 1 to 99, and these numeric values can also be described qualitatively. Table 1 provides recommended descriptors for various percentile ranges. When used, these descriptors should be used in conjunction with a description of the comparison group. A more complete description of Jonny’s performance could thus read, “On a standardized assessment of Oral Reading Fluency, Jonny performed as well as or better than 75 percent of other Grade 3 students assessed using DIBELS Oral Reading Fluency in fall of the 2024-2025 school year, and whose scores were entered into the mCLASS or DIBELS Data Systems. This performance places him in the above average range compared to other students in this sample.”

In the tables that follow, we first report percentile ranks by grade for all available subtests and scores, followed by two tables for the DIBELS 8 Composite Score percentile ranks: one for the Composite Score in Kindergarten through Grade 4, and one for the Composite Score in Grades 5 through 8. For example, Table 2 presents the percentiles for kindergarten, a grade in which students are assessed using four subtests: Letter Naming Fluency (LNF), Phonemic Segmentation Fluency (PSF), Nonsense Word Fluency (NWF), and Word Reading Fluency (WRF). The NWF subtest provides two related but distinct scores, Correct Letter Sounds (CLS) and Words Recoded Correctly (WRC), resulting in a table with percentile ranks for five scores: LNF, PSF, NWF–CLS, NWF–WRC, and WRF. Complete descriptions of and additional information regarding these subtests is available in the DIBELS 8 Technical Manual (University of Oregon, 2019).

For each subtest, tables include columns representing each of the three benchmark periods: beginning, middle, and end of year. Benchmark periods are denoted in decimal form, such that 0.1 represents the beginning of kindergarten, 0.2 represents the middle of kindergarten, and 0.3 represents the end of kindergarten. The inclusion of a grade indicator alongside the benchmark period eases reading the tables, which each extend over many pages. Similarly, the raw score is repeated on both the left and right side of each table, to facilitate locating the desired percentile rank.
